These are the one-way roads out of London today

THE GREAT MARCH OUT OF CHILDREN TO "SOMEWHERE IN BRITAIN" WILL AFFECT NINE MAIN ROUTES

Nine routes out of London will be operated today, from 7 a.m. onwards, as one-way streets to expedite London's evacuation. These routes, shown in the map above, will be for outward-bound traffic only. Those wishing to enter London must use other routes.

How evacuation will affect trains and buses

Daily Express Staff Reporter

TRAIN and bus services will be severely curtailed between 8 a.m. and 5.30 p.m. today and for the following two or three days while schoolchildren and invalids are being evacuated.

If YOU are travelling during the week-end the official announcements below will save you inconvenience.

Underground railways and central (red) buses

"Children will be entrained at seventy-two Underground stations," says the London Passenger Transport Board.

"At certain stations there will be periods during which the facilities will be used almost wholly for the conveyance of children, so that it may not be possible to accept ordinary passengers."

"As necessary, stations will be closed altogether to traffic other than official evacuation traffic."

"Besides the railways, a large number of trams and trolleybuses will be needed and these can be provided only by withdrawal from normal services."

"It is felt that the public will co-operate so that the organisation may run smoothly. They are advised that during this period they should travel only if compelled."

Green Line coaches and country (green) buses

"London Transport Green Line coach services will be curtailed or withdrawn. Country bus services may be subject to temporary restriction."

People travelling by bus and Underground should be able to get to their offices by 9 a.m. without inconvenience.

As regards evening business traffic, it is hoped there will be little dislocation from 6 p.m. onwards.

The railways

The main-line railways announce that during evacuation alterations in the existing passenger services will be necessary and the public are requested to limit their train travel to essential journeys. The following will be of guidance:—

LONDON SUBURBAN SERVICES: Before 8 a.m. and after 5.30 p.m. services will be as near as possible normal. Between 8 a.m. and 5.30 p.m. skeleton services only will operate.

PROVINCIAL SUBURBAN SERVICES: During the hours of evacuation, skeleton services only will operate.

SCRATCHED

Yesterday's racing news announced that the following horse has been scratched from all engagements:—
WARCLOUD.

North Eastern sections are cancelled for today and tomorrow, and for the last two sections on Sunday as well.

During evacuation today about sixty trains will run from Liverpool Street, forty from King's Cross, and twenty from Marylebone.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY: Business trains will be practically normal, although there will be a few cancellations. During evacuation fifty per cent. of the normal services will be curtailed.

There will be no cheap tickets today, tomorrow or Sunday.

Tomorrow morning business trains will be similar to those today, but evacuation traffic will take precedence during the rest of the day.

There will be NO SATURDAY-ONLY TRAINS as shown in the time-table, and excursion trains have been cancelled for the week-end.

Arrangements for Sunday will be similar, and ordinary travellers, unless they have essential journeys to make, are urged not to travel.

24 HOURS A DAY ON SHELTERS

Daily Express Staff Reporter

DAY and night shifts to speed up work on public A.R.P. shelters and covered trenches were ordered, last night, in telegrams sent to all local authorities by the Lord Privy Seal's department.

These men inspire

CONFIDENCE

A.R.P. Controllers—most of them chief constables or town clerks, who were selected several months ago "as men likely to inspire confidence by their powers of leadership under severe strain"—were last night ordered by the Lord Privy Seal's department to assume their duties.

They were appointed when the country was divided into twelve regions for war organisation.

These controllers will maintain communication between the regional commissioners and the local A.R.P. services, and will ensure that advice, guidance and instructions regarding air raids precautions sent by the Government can be acted on immediately.

In an emergency they would give any major executive decision required in the operation of the various local A.R.P. services.

"If as many as fifty bombs of the largest size fell in a square mile, any individual within that area would have something like 100—1 chance of escaping direct-hit effects."

"Direct effects of a high-explosive bomb extend over a very limited range—not further in most cases than a 30ft. radius."

"It is the secondary effects—splinters, blast and debris—which are liable to cause the greatest number of casualties in an air raid, and against these the individual can do a great deal to protect himself."

"VIRTUALLY SECURE"

"Any one who has an Anderson shelter, properly earthed over, is virtually secure from anything except a direct hit, or its equivalent."

"Shelters not yet erected should be assembled at once. Those who have no garden shelters can obtain a considerable degree of protection by digging a trench in the garden with eighteen inches of overhead earth cover."

"The ordinary dwelling-house offers a good deal of protection. Well-constructed buildings are not easily brought down unless a big bomb falls very close indeed."

"PEOPLE SHOULD NOT BE UPSET BY PICTURES OF WHAT HAPPENED TO THE POORLY-BUILT HOUSES IN SPAIN."

"The best place inside the house is the basement or the ground floor. Choose a passage or a room with a small window for the place of refuge. Small or narrow rooms are better than large ones."

The Lord Privy Seal's telegrams also instructed local authorities to set up A.R.P. emergency committees consisting of three members of the area's A.R.P. Council to support the local controller.

Twenty per cent. of whole-time members of A.R.P. services, including the Auxiliary Fire Service, were called up by last night's instructions.
